

Appreciation

During the process of this dissertation, many supporters have endorsed its formation. My parents have cherished my interest and tenacity about the US, the US-school system and the historic research within this system. My husband has accompanied me supportively during my work and on all research trips to the USA and has helped me with piling and collecting (and copying) bibliographic data at the AOSHS-Archives in Wichita, Kansas.

The research initiation and continuation of this work has been promoted by Dr. Thomas Drysdale, President Emeritus of the American Overseas Schools Historical Society-Archives. Reams of correspondences have kept me informed – and kept me going. More so, Tom has become a trusted friend to me over the years.

My brother Gunther translated the work into English; his advice and motivation with the translation was essential at the end of my work. Bob and Kay Pendleton have helped proof-reading and auditing the dissertation. Wolfgang Gehring's co-corrections were worthwhile for the special perspective of a professor for English Didactics.

Our monthly gathering, the so-called "Diss-Runde" our dissertation circle with Dr. Holger Preiß, Dr. Christoph Ratz, Bettina König and Ulrike Ott granted good listeners and smart judges for many open questions. The statistical aid of our University's Computer Center & IT Services, Frau Keller, and my colleague, Dr. Peter Marx in the psychology department, granted statistical know-how. Frau Elske Körber, has contributed professionally to format the work.

Within the school system as well, I received fruitful help from several sides: Dr. Embler at the Hedquarter accompanied the process of applying and approving with patience and know-how. Frau Petzold, former Host Nation-teacher gave intensive and lively insights into the program of the 1960s and 1970s. Several teachers were voluntarily granting a pre-test phase. As a whole, I am very grateful to all principals and teachers, who were participating actively in my questionnaire.

And last but surely not least, a very special credit goes to my doctoral advisor, Frau Professorin Dr. Margarete Götz. In 2005, Frau Götz has accompanied a group of students to the elementary school in Würzburg, Germany and has thus laid the roots for this research.

Thank you very much – und vielen, herzlichen Dank an Sie/Euch alle, die mich mit Rat und Tat und viel Verständnis in dieser Arbeit begleitet haben.
